In Practice

- ⬆️ A decree adopted in Tunisia in mid-2016 has allowed its public procurement agency to start publishing a registry listing companies in violation of public bidding.
- ⬇️ Sanctioned companies in Cameroon continue to apply for bids, highlighting the persistence of corruption in the attribution and execution of public procurement.
- ⬇️ Despite a number of recommendations by Senegal's public procurement agency in its audit reports, no actions or sanctions have been taken against entities in violation of the law.
- ⬇️ Although provided for by law, there is no registry of companies banned from bidding in Sao Tome and Principe.
